

“When you sit there and really look at something, you see all the variations of shape and color and all the nuances. I like to go back and sit in the same place over and over again to see how the passage of time changes things up.”